and capital deployment. It featured such distinguished speakers as Dr Gunter Pauli, Dr Iqbal Survé and Christine Dawood to name but a few.

The Zurich edition focused on urgent global challenges: climate change, energy transition, impact investing, artificial intelligence, and next-generation technologies. Distinguished keynote speakers presented bold visions for a future built on ethical investment, responsible innovation, and cross-border collaboration.

Key Takeaways and Outcomes:

Climate and Energy Transition: Experts stressed the importance of accelerating investments into clean energy infrastructure, carbon capture technologies, and circular economy models. Several organizations showcased new hydrogen, solar, and battery storage projects aimed at long-term decarbonization.

Impact Investing & ESG: Institutional investors and family offices debated the evolving role of ESG frameworks, highlighting the importance of transparency, measurable outcomes, and scalable impact. The consensus was clear—profit and purpose are no longer competing priorities but complementary imperatives.

Artificial Intelligence & Emerging Technologies: A dedicated session explored how AI, blockchain, and quantum computing can address sustainability challenges. Speakers emphasized responsible AI governance and data ethics as essential for global trust and adoption.

Networking and Deal-Making: The Forum facilitated exclusive roundtables, private investment sessions, and bilateral negotiations. Multiple partnerships and investment commitments were initiated, particularly in green infrastructure, biotech, and digital transformation sectors.
