Veteran awards recipients include Mark “Oz” Geist, Carl Higbie, Nick Freitas, Mike Dragich, Jimmy May, Graham Allen, and Amber Hargrove.

The evening will also honor pro-law enforcement advocates such as Patrick Bet-David, along with a special award presentation to a 9-year-old girl for her extraordinary bravery in the face of tragedy.

“This event is about unity, gratitude, and remembrance,” said Jon Adler, National President of the FLEOA Foundation. “The Big Blue Bash will bring together agency heads, veterans, and advocates to celebrate the extraordinary dedication of those who safeguard our country every day.”

Kyle Reyes, owner of The 1776 Project, which owns Law Enforcement Today, added: “This event is an opportunity to raise money for an incredible charity dedicated to saving lives—all while honoring God by paying tribute to those who serve and protect.”

Proceeds from the Big Blue Bash will benefit the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Foundation, a 501(c)3 that provide vital support to the families of wounded and fallen officers. Funds will help advance a nationwide foundation multimedia storytelling initiative dedicated to sharing the untold stories of federal officers—spotlighting their courage, challenges, and personal sacrifices in the fight against drug trafficking, human trafficking, border threats, and violent crime.

“This will be one of the most influential law enforcement events ever hosted, and we are honored to be selected as the beneficiary charity in support of our nation's heroes,” said Adler.

“The Big Blue Bash reflects our mission to celebrate and support the law enforcement community while recognizing those who have dedicated their lives to protecting the American people,” said Reyes.

Sponsorship opportunities are available, and due to security and space limitations, only a limited number of tickets are available to the public.
