Steffen Dietrich: Bigwig of Berlin's Criminal Defence System

Steffen Dietrich is a Berlin-born criminal defence lawyer who is known for his ability to blend theoretical and special practical skills in criminal law. He has nearly two decades of experience in criminal law and has been awarded the title 'Specialist Lawyer for Criminal Law' by the Berlin Bar Association.

He pursued legal studies at Humboldt University in Berlin and Leopold Franzens University in Innsbruck. Steffen's passion for helping others drove him to gain practical experience even during his studies. He worked at a commercial law firm, Rödl Enneking & Partner, part of the Rödl & Partner network, where he gained early exposure to the legal industry.

Following that, he completed his legal clerkship in Berlin, which got him the opportunity to work at two prominent law firms:

>> Dan Assan & Partners in Tel Aviv, an Israeli firm engaged in human rights advocacy, particularly for Palestinians.

>> Later at Dr. Wolff and Partners, which is Germany's well-known law firm, known for its high-profile defence cases, including the defense of former GDR State Council Chairman Erich Honecker case.

It was when working at Dr. Wolff and Partners that he realized the lack of emphasis on the rights of the accused within the justice system. Driven to bridge the gap with genuine representation, he co-founded Krautzig Dietrich along with attorney Thomas Krautzig in 2006, shortly after being admitted to the bar.

At Krautzig Dietrich, he led the criminal law department that further honed his skills. Later in 2012, he went on to establish his own law firm Dietrich Criminal Law Firm, where he demonstrates compassionate and rigorous courtroom advocacy.
