Driving Operational Excellence, Team
Leadership, and Community Impact
Across Sinclair Tractor's Southeast Iowa
Locations

Influential Women proudly highlights Madison A. Heitshusen in its prestigious 2025 series, celebrating her as the Corporate Parts Manager, where she oversaw 13 location parts departments at Sinclair Tractor, a family-owned John Deere dealership based in Southeast Iowa. In her role, Madison ensured smooth parts operations, delivering quality customer service while coordinating seamlessly across parts sales, customer support, and inventory management. In her time with Sinclair Tractor, she built a strong reputation for operational expertise, leadership, and a commitment to excellence.

Before her tenure at Sinclair Tractor, Madison gained valuable experience as a Business Analyst at Van Wall Equipment. There, she conducted strategic process analyses, assisted in accounts payable and settlement functions, completed dealer acquisition projects, and assisted with change management initiatives. She also worked at Ziegler Caterpillar as a Credit Administrator and Finance Coordinator, managing finance quotes, accounts receivable, and documentation for agricultural and construction equipment transactions. These roles gave her a solid foundation in finance, operations, and customer relations, equipping her to bridge technical expertise with practical leadership.

Madison holds a Bachelor of Applied Science (BASc) in Agribusiness/Agricultural Business

Operations from Iowa State University, combining academic knowledge with hands-on experience to drive results in the fast-paced retail and equipment industry. Her leadership style emphasizes efficiency, teamwork, and a commitment to improving processes across all levels of her organization.

Reflecting on the influences that shaped her career, Madison credits her family for instilling her strong work ethic and determination. "I hold myself to that same standard today. My upbringing and the example set by these strong role models have shaped my work ethic, determination, and resilience," she says, referencing her grandparents, who continue farming together at 81 and 83, and her parents, who have balanced careers while growing their farming operation over the past 30+ years.

For young women entering the agricultural industry, Madison offers this guidance: "There will be challenges. Stand tall and remain steadfast in all that you know and believe. Remain committed to your work and those you serve. If you do all of these things, there's not much you can't accomplish."

Beyond her professional responsibilities, Madison is committed to her community and values giving back to her small town. She also places family at the center of her life and career, striving to honor the lessons of hard work, dedication, and resilience she learned from the role models who inspired her.

Influential Women is proud to recognize Madison A. Heitshusen for her outstanding leadership, operational excellence, and dedication to both her industry and her community.
