Written by a former U.S. Air Force intelligence officer and leading strategist, The Revenge of Ideology argues that today's geopolitical rivalries cannot be explained by hard power alone. From Russia's war in Ukraine to China's re-engineering of its economy and Turkey's regional resurgence, Dr. Sotiriadis contends that the world's most consequential decisions are driven not by rational calculation but by what he calls Ideological Power Networks. These are the invisible architectures of conviction that bind nations, economies, and elites together around narratives of destiny and purpose.

China, Neo-Eurasian Imperialism in Russia, and Neo-Turkic Autonomy in Turkey—are transforming the twenty-first-century order. Each fuses history, culture, and technology into a self-reinforcing mission that redefines legitimacy, security, and identity on the global stage. The result is a world where competing ideological power networks—not just material interests—determine the future balance of global power.

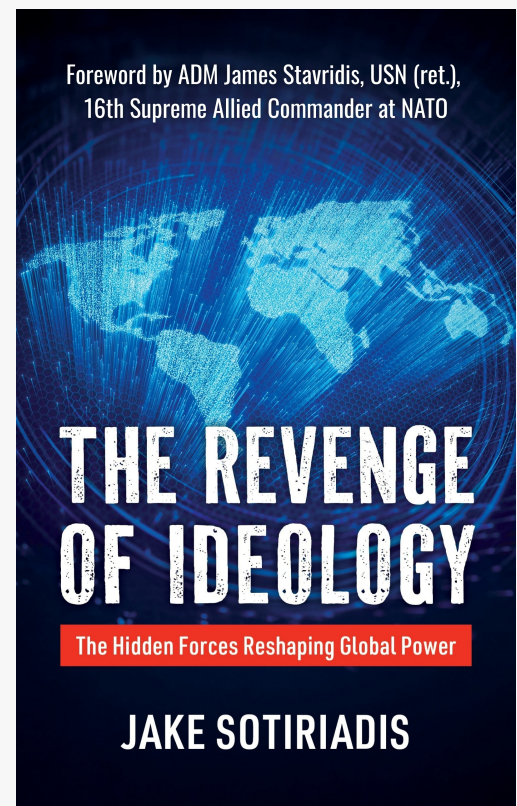

Admiral James Stavridis, former NATO Supreme Allied Commander, captured the book's impact in his foreword: "Jake Sotiriadis gives us a new lens through which to view an increasingly chaotic world—and shows that what looks like chaos often has an underlying logic."

Since its release, The Revenge of Ideology has rapidly gained traction across defense, diplomatic, and business communities. Its synthesis of economics, strategy, and foresight has positioned it as a bridge between disciplines that too often operate in isolation. The book is now informing discussions among policymakers and corporate leaders seeking to anticipate emerging threats through the lens of belief-driven strategy.

Dr. Sotiriadis' insights continue to resonate with readers who recognize that understanding ideology is no longer optional—it is essential for navigating the century ahead.
