About the Legal Entity Identifier (LEI)

The Legal Entity Identifier (LEI), commonly referred to as an LEI code, is a globally recognized, 20 character alphanumeric code that uniquely identifies legal entities participating in financial transactions. Developed in the wake of the 2008 financial crisis to improve transparency and risk management, LEIs link to open, high quality reference data about each entity. Regulators and market participants use LEIs to streamline reporting, reduce operational risk, and enhance compliance across borders. Many jurisdictions require an LEI for trading, transaction reporting, and other regulated activities.
