

Bishop Stan Williams Bridges Faith and Scholarship with Global Publication Through Regent University

Pastor and author of fifteen books gains global recognition through Regent University theological publication.

JACKSONVILLE, FL, UNITED STATES, October 29, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ --

In a world where the small, urban, inner-city church and academic scholarship rarely meet, Bishop Stan Williams is helping build a bridge between the two. After more than thirty years of prophetic ministry, theological study, and community leadership, Bishop Williams has authored an internationally peer-reviewed journal article, published through Regent University, now archived to be studied by theologians and scholars for generations to come.

The article stands as a landmark of faith and intellect, uniting theology, prophetic vision, and practical strategy in a work now recognized by the global academic community. It is not merely an academic paper—it is the written testament of a lifetime of revelation, discipline, and the relentless pursuit of divine truth.

A Bridge Between the Pulpit and the Academy

For decades, Bishop Williams has served faithfully among communities often overlooked by larger religious institutions. As the visionary behind The National Small Church Conference, now celebrating its tenth year, he has created a national platform that empowers pastors and leaders to strengthen local churches across America. That movement became both the context and the catalyst for his scholarly research.

“The small church is not a symbol of limitation, it is a vessel of power and prophetic relevance,”

Bishop Stan Williams, Senior Pastor of The Church 3:20 in Jacksonville, Florida — bridging faith and scholarship through his Regent University global publication.

Bishop Williams said. “This study was birthed from that conviction: that God still uses the local church as His divine strategy to change nations.”

His published work through Regent University, the same academic institution known for producing influential Christian thought leaders, marks a rare intersection of lived ministry and peer-reviewed scholarship. It challenges the assumption that theological credibility and prophetic ministry must exist apart, offering both the academy and the church a new model for integrated, Spirit-filled research.

A Capstone of Distinction

Bishop Williams completed a doctoral-level capstone study demonstrating the same level of rigor, research, and spiritual excellence expected of a terminal research degree. Though not enrolled in a formal doctoral program, his study reflects the intellectual precision and prophetic insight of a dissertation, blending scriptural depth with practical strategies for strengthening small churches in urban and global contexts.

The capstone represents a new benchmark for the integration of prophetic leadership and academic discipline, providing a framework that empowers pastors and scholars alike to think critically while remaining grounded in revelation. His work serves as a model for future researchers exploring how theology and community transformation intersect in real-world ministry.

Beyond his academic research, Bishop Stan Williams has published and authored over fifteen books that continue to serve the Christian community worldwide.
