As the cooler temperatures of fall and winter approach, Huntington Handyman has shared a new blog post with tips on outdoor wood, decks, and other winter preparations. The post explains to homeowners how the cool temperatures and winter moisture in Alexandria, Virginia, can destroy outdoor wood structures, and why a handyman repair project is necessary now before winter strikes.

Many of Alexandria's homes — including in Huntington, Belle View, Hybla Valley and Groveton — boast lovely wooden decks, fences, and other outdoor features that suffer when the weather turns wet and cold. Now is a perfect time to fix, reseal, or secure these structures with a handyman.

The freeze-thaw cycle in Alexandria and Fairfax County can work posts loose, warp boards, and even cause rot in unprotected wood. Preventive maintenance not only helps prevent expensive replacements but also keeps outdoor spaces safe and beautiful. The new content from Huntington helps customers get ready for winter.
