

Empowering Young Voices: How InAmerica Guides Students to Scholastic Success

InAmerica students win big at the Scholastic Awards thanks to expert mentorship, thoughtful coaching, and a commitment to creative excellence.

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, October 31, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- InAmerica Education, a premier academic and admissions consulting firm founded in 2013, is proud to announce its continued success in guiding students to national recognition through the Scholastic Art & Writing Awards. With dozens of students receiving Gold and Silver Keys, and many more earning Honorable Mentions, InAmerica continues to distinguish itself as a leader in creative and academic mentorship.

Founded in 1923, the Scholastic Art & Writing Awards are the nation's longest-running and most prestigious program recognizing creative teens. These awards have celebrated the early work of luminaries like Andy Warhol, Sylvia Plath, and Stephen King. Each year, hundreds of thousands of submissions are reviewed by panels of creative professionals, with only the most exceptional works awarded. Receiving a Scholastic award is a significant achievement, and for students working with InAmerica, that achievement is becoming the norm.

InAmerica's standout success is not coincidental. It is the result of thoughtful leadership, deeply personalized mentorship, and a tireless work ethic from its team of seasoned consultants. Students are matched with expert mentors who guide them through the ideation, drafting, and revision process, helping them not only develop polished submissions but also deeper confidence in their own creative voices. The process is rigorous, yet empowering.

"Helping students find and refine their voice is at the core of what we do," says Yang Yu, Consultant of College Preparations and Enrichment at InAmerica. "It's not about chasing awards—it's about teaching students to pursue excellence with clarity, depth, and integrity. The recognition simply follows."

The firm's comprehensive approach includes early brainstorming, genre-specific coaching, detailed editorial feedback, and submission management. This structure not only supports students artistically but also prepares them to translate these experiences into compelling narratives for college applications and beyond.

InAmerica's extraordinary record of success with the Scholastic Awards affirms what families have long trusted: when students are nurtured with purpose, structure, and expertise, they thrive. And in the case of Scholastic, they shine.
