

Federation Pest Control Warns Holyoke Homeowners About Increased Rodent Activity This Fall

As temperatures drop in October, local experts urge residents to schedule proactive pest control to prevent rodent infestations.

HOLYOKE, MA, UNITED STATES, October 31, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- With cooler temperatures sweeping across Western Massachusetts, Federation Pest Control is alerting residents to a sharp rise in rodent activity this fall. The company's licensed specialists report an uptick in calls from homeowners encountering rats and mice seeking warmth and food indoors — a seasonal trend that peaks between October and December.

As the region's trusted experts in pest control Holyoke, Federation Pest Control is launching an educational awareness effort this month to help families protect their homes before infestations escalate.

"Once rodents find a way in, they can cause costly damage and spread bacteria throughout your home," said a spokesperson from Federation Pest Control. "We're encouraging Holyoke and nearby residents to seal potential entry points, store food properly, and schedule preventative treatments now — before the colder months drive pests further inside."

Why Fall Is Prime Time for Rodents in Massachusetts

According to the National Pest Management Association, nearly 21 million U.S. homes experience rodent invasions each winter, with infestations commonly beginning in October as outdoor temperatures dip. Mice can enter through openings as small as a dime, while rats often nest in basements, garages, and attics seeking warmth and shelter.

Federation Pest Control's technicians have already observed a 30% increase in rodent-related service calls across Holyoke, Chicopee, and South Hadley this month alone — an early sign that this year's pest season could be more active than usual.

"Rodent infestations don't just stop at property damage," the company representative added. "They pose real health risks by contaminating food and triggering allergies. Early inspection and treatment are the most effective ways to prevent a serious problem later."

Proactive Prevention and Professional Treatment Options

To support homeowners this fall, Federation Pest Control offers comprehensive rodent prevention and treatment programs tailored to local conditions. Their approach combines safe baiting systems, entry-point sealing, and long-term exclusion techniques to eliminate pests effectively and humanely.
