Hodgson, Founder of Tremark Associates. "Thirty years on, I'm proud that those same values still define us. Our success has always come from consistency, care, and the quality of the people who represent our name."

At 25, Tremark Chairman & Founder Mark Hodgson was balancing a career coaching football at Leeds United when redundancy and the adoption of his daughter prompted a reassessment of priorities. The idea of starting a company that respected people's lives as much as their output took root.

When I founded Tremark in 1995, my goal was simple - to create a professional, dependable, and ethical company that clients could trust with sensitive legal matters.”

Mark Hodgson

“I wanted to build something that worked for people, not against them,” Hodgson recalls. “Some of our earliest hires were mothers and retirees who brought incredible judgment and calm under pressure. What mattered was ability, not a rigid schedule.”

Those early hires shaped a business culture grounded in flexibility, trust, and competence. What began as a small debt recovery service soon pivoted toward process serving and investigations for legal clients, with a practical ethos that still underpins Tremark today: give clients what they actually need, not what looks impressive on a presentation slide.

Behind every urgent instruction now sits a finely tuned structure - the product of 30 years of refinement. Tremark's office team coordinates assignments, matching each case with the right process server or investigator based on geography, skill set, and timing.

With more than 80 vetted field agents and 21 head-office colleagues, Tremark's reach spans every corner of the globe. That operational depth, paired with its global network of partners, ensures that legal papers reach the correct door at the correct time... Reliably, quietly, and professionally.

In an industry that often attracts attention only when things go wrong, Tremark has built its reputation on getting the small things right: accurate reports, clear communication, and promises kept.

Tremark's reputation is reinforced by rigorous accreditation and compliance. The firm holds:

- ISO 9001:2015 for quality management.
- BS 102000 for investigative services.

It is also registered with the Information Commissioner's Office (ICO) and a long-standing member of the Association of British Investigators (ABI).

The journey hasn't been without challenges. In its early years, Tremark navigated the realities of under-pricing and over-work - lessons that would shape the company's future discipline.

During the 2008-09 recession, when many competitors downsized or disappeared, Tremark expanded - opening its London office and earning industry awards including Best Debt Recovery Company and Investigator of the Year.

Three decades later, Tremark's methods have evolved with technology - but its principles remain constant.

Each instruction is handled with the same care: a case manager plans routes, anticipates complications, and keeps clients updated with plain-language reports. Whether serving papers across town or coordinating with an overseas partner, Tremark's team delivers precision and discretion, not drama.

As the process serving and private investigation sectors have become more regulated, Tremark has stayed at the forefront of ethical and compliant practice. The firm continues to champion transparency, client care, and responsible investigation - qualities that have earned it long-term partnerships with major law firms, financial institutions, and government agencies.
