Leadership Safety Coaching – Maximizing Performance

Coaching is critical to organizational performance and the most effective way to inspire your team. Coaching is the leadership style focused on getting the best out of people. Coaching aims to help leaders and employees perform at their best — every time, everywhere. Everyone can be a coach, from an executive to influential peers.

Shawn Galloway

This session covers the five factors necessary for successful coaching: familiarize, focus, find, feedback, and facilitate. Attendees will have an opportunity to participate in small discovery groups and receive printed materials to support their new ability to influence behavior, culture, and performance, and overall safety improvement strategy focus areas. The session is highly participative and leaves attendees thinking differently, prepared to lead differently, and focused on what will work best to coach for performance in their work environment.

Shared Ownership – Engaging the Subcultures for Safety Excellence

Based on his next book, Shared Ownership: Engaging the Subcultures, which will be published in early 2025, Shawn Galloway explores how to develop the final step in true employee engagement. In this engaging presentation, we will delve into the art of fostering exceptional engagement and a sense of shared ownership among the remarkable individuals you lead. Discover how supporting your frontline supervisors—those in direct contact with the workforce—is critical in igniting enthusiasm and commitment throughout your organization. Learn that great engagement is not an accident; it requires deliberate planning, sustained effort, and continuous nurturing, especially in large and established organizations where the initial momentum may have faded.
