In his presentation, Turner reveals a turnkey approach that allows high-net-worth individuals and family offices to convert tax liabilities into an owned Bitcoin position by investing in productive mining infrastructure rather than buying BTC directly. Leveraging tools like 100% first-year bonus depreciation, Section 179 expensing, and operating expense write-offs, investors can achieve immediate tax savings and a lower effective cost of Bitcoin acquisition.

Beau explains how investing in a mining operations is a way to gain exposure to the asset while also participating in the infrastructure that underpins the entire network. This is fundamentally different from simply buying Bitcoin on an exchange. It's an investment in the ongoing security and operation of the network, which can yield even higher returns.

"We help investors turn tax liabilities into productive assets," said Turner. "By owning mining infrastructure, they gain both income and long-term Bitcoin exposure."

His talk covers three themes:

1. Redeploy Real Estate Capital: How investors are moving from property to mining for faster returns.
2. Unlock Tax Advantages: How infrastructure ownership reshapes tax outcomes and long-term positioning.
3. Generate Predictable Income: How managed, renewable-energy mining produces steady, hands-off cash flow.
