MyLittlePicassos.com, a new company designed to help children explore their creativity through hands-on, screen-free art experiences.

My Little Picassos offers oversized coloring banners and art kits that encourage kids to collaborate, color, and create together. The large-format designs are perfect for classrooms, playrooms, community centers, and family gatherings — giving children a fun, shared way to express themselves.

“Our mission is to bring back the joy of creative play,” said Katharine Pritsos, founder of MyLittlePicassos.com. “Kids spend so much time on screens these days. We want to give them something tangible — a huge canvas they can color together, where imagination takes over.”

Printed in partnership with Plans4Less.com, a national leader in large-scale printing, the banners feature vibrant, kid-friendly themes and are made from high-quality materials that stand up to repeated use.

Pritsos, a long-term advocate for creative education, believes that fostering imagination at an early age builds confidence and problem-solving skills. “Art gives kids a sense of pride,” he said. “When they stand back and see a mural they helped create, you can see their faces light up. That’s what this is all about.”

MyLittlePicassos.com products are now available for families, schools, and community organizations. The company also plans to partner with local events and art programs to promote creativity and collaboration among children of all ages.
