Global Immigration Partners Unveils
Strategic Guidance for E-2 Visa Holders Seeking Permanent U.S. Residency

Washington, DC — November — Global Immigration Partners PLLC, a leading authority in U.S. investor and business immigration law, announced new guidance today on the increasingly common question among foreign entrepreneurs: Is it possible for an E-2 Visa to lead to a U.S. Green Card?

According to the firm, while the E-2 Treaty Investor Visa does not directly confer permanent resident status, several structured immigration pathways allow qualified E-2 investors to successfully transition to a Green Card through strategic planning and targeted visa restructuring.

E-2 Visa Holders Have Multiple Paths to a Green Card

Global Immigration Partners outlines the primary routes available to investors:

- EB-5 Immigrant Investor Green Card

E-2 investors can convert their business investment into an EB-5-eligible structure.

Key requirements include:

Lawful investment of $800,000–$1,050,000

Creation of 10 full-time U.S. jobs

Proper investment source and at-risk criteria

E-2 businesses can often be adapted to meet these EB-5 rules with proper legal and financial planning.

- EB-1C Multinational
Executive/Manager Category

Business owners who manage operations both in the U.S. and abroad may qualify for EB-1C.
This Green Card category benefits investors with:

Global Immigration Partners

With the right legal strategy, E-2 entrepreneurs can pursue permanent residency and secure long-term stability for their families and businesses.”

Executive or managerial roles

Ownership of multinational business entities

At least one year of overseas qualifying employment

- Employer-Sponsored EB-2 or EB-3 Green Cards

E-2 visa holders working within their own U.S. company or another employer may be eligible for employment-based sponsorship through the PERM labor certification process.

- Spousal, Marriage, or Family-Based Green Cards

Family relationships—including marriage to a U.S. citizen—may provide direct eligibility for permanent residency.

Global Immigration Partners: Expert Analysis

“Many foreign investors are surprised to discover that the E-2 visa, while technically temporary, can be the foundation for several permanent residency options,” said Alexander Jovy, Co-managing Partner at Global Immigration Partners PLLC. “With careful planning, a strong business structure, and knowledgeable legal strategy, E-2 visa holders can map out a clear transition to U.S. permanent residency.”
