Executive Producers Richard Gere and Oren Moverman stated, "We are thrilled by the extraordinary response audiences are showing for Wisdom of Happiness in theaters and through virtual cinema screenings across North America. To have people gathering -- whether in person or on-line -- and engaging with His Holiness the Dalai Lama's message of compassion and joy during these challenging times has been profoundly moving. The sold-out screenings and extended engagements prove to us that audiences are hungry for this kind of meaningful cinema. We're honored to share this offering with them.

The film is qualified for consideration in the Best Documentary category for the 98th Academy Awards® and continues its U.S. theatrical rollout through Abramorama in partnership with Theorem Media as part of The Year of Compassion, a global initiative celebrating the Dalai Lama's 90th birthday. The Dalai Lama has worked tirelessly throughout his life to inspire a non-violent revolution that continues to challenge people of disparate faiths and persuasions to view politics, globalization, the climate crisis, and the nature of human relationships in an all-encompassing light.

Directed by Barbara Miller and Philip Delaquis, and executive produced by Gere alongside Academy Award-nominated filmmaker Oren Moverman, the film follows the world's greatest ambassador of compassion, the Dalai Lama, as he invites audiences along for a journey to the source of happiness. Wisdom of Happiness has screened theatrically to critical and audience acclaim in Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Netherlands, Greece, Spain, Italy, Czech Republic, Hungary, Croatia, and France, with over 250,000 tickets sold.

With cinematography by long-time Dalai Lama documentarian Manuel Bauer, the film blends unprecedented access, powerful cinematic visuals, and never-before-seen archival material to provide a once-in-a-lifetime personal audience with the Dalai Lama, delivering calm, clarity, joy and humor from an inspirational global leader.

Guided by the Dalai Lama's words, the film uses poignant imagery to expose both the beauty and peril of a world shaped by human activity. In the film, he describes the small steps anyone can take to develop their own consciousness in ways that transcend the zeitgeist or political currents of the day. Our awareness can unfold tremendous power through the single most important sentiment according to the Dalai Lama: profound compassion for all living beings.
