during adjudication:

1. Choosing EB-5 Projects with Filed or Approved I-956F (Exemplar)

One of the quickest ways to move an EB-5 application forward is to select a Regional Center project with a filed or approved Form I-956F (Exemplar). When the project structure and job creation methodology have already been reviewed, USCIS can focus on the investor-specific elements, which may lead to a smoother adjudication process.

2. Using Set-Aside Visa Categories to Avoid Backlogs

Under the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act, investors can benefit from set-aside visa categories (Rural, High-Unemployment, and Infrastructure). For nationals from countries that experience visa retrogression, these set-asides may offer:

For many of our clients, EB-5 is about more than investment — it's about securing a stable and prosperous future for their children.”

Faster visa availability

Reduced risk of long priority date backlogs

A more predictable path from EB-5 petition to immigrant visa or adjustment of status

Global Immigration Partners advises investors to integrate set-aside strategy into their initial EB-5 planning.

3. “USCIS-Ready” Source-of-Funds and Documentation Packages

The most common delays in EB-5 adjudication come from Requests for Evidence (RFEs) and Notices of Intent to Deny (NOIDs). To reduce that risk, the firm prepares “USCIS-ready” EB-5 filings that include:

Detailed lawful source-of-funds reports

Multi-jurisdictional fund tracing (bank accounts, securities, real estate, business proceeds)

Supporting contracts, tax returns, share purchase agreements, loan documents, and currency transfer records

Internal pre-filing audits for EB-5 statutory and regulatory compliance

This approach is designed to minimize questions at the adjudication stage and speed up EB-5 decision-making where possible.

4. Concurrent Filing for Investors Already in the United States

For investors lawfully present in the U.S. in another status (for example, E-2, L-1, F-1, H-1B), concurrent filing of Form I-526E (EB-5 petition) and Form I-485 (Adjustment of Status) can unlock earlier benefits, including:

Employment Authorization Document (EAD)

Advance Parole for international travel

The ability to remain in the U.S. while the EB-5 petition is pending

Global Immigration Partners' attorneys advise on whether concurrent filing is available and strategically appropriate in each case.

5. Internal "Premium" Workflows for Faster Petition Preparation
