The atmosphere inside the Canal+ studio reached new heights as the music brought the audience to their feet. Viewers and guests began clapping, moving to the beat, and eventually dancing together—turning the J-1 set into a moment of shared happiness broadcast across France and beyond.

"This was more than a performance—it was a reminder of how music connects us," said Idd Aziz. "When we see people smiling and dancing together, that's the spirit of MLife."

The performance quickly went viral on social media, with clips circulating across Instagram,

TikTok, and X as fans praised the group's authentic energy and cultural fusion. Messages from viewers described the moment as "powerful," "full of life," and "exactly what television needs."

DJ Mathias Pace elevated the experience with dynamic Afro-house rhythms, while Erell's expressive choreography embodied the spirit of freedom and movement, adding visual poetry to the performance. Together with MLife Artists, they delivered a show that resonated far beyond the walls of the studio.
