The additional space will support the agency’s move toward fully integrated, comprehensive plans that combine strategy, design, marketing, and technology under one managed program. This shift reflects the company’s long-standing emphasis on planning, research, and personalized service rather than template-based or one-off services.

“We’ve always believed that businesses benefit from strategy before execution,” said Ken Carroll, Creative

Director at Integrus Design. “Expanding our space allows us to continue building a team and workflow that supports deeper planning, higher accountability, and long-term partnerships with our clients.”

Integrus Design’s comprehensive plans include structured research, ongoing support, managed hosting, performance tracking, and coordinated marketing services. The expansion allows the firm to maintain its boutique, high-touch approach while increasing capacity for collaborative work, client meetings, and production.

The expanded space includes upgraded planning and production areas, including a large-screen display for collaborative work, dedicated planning boards, and a separate creative room with a photography area.

The company will begin operating in the expanded office immediately.
