A core part of Monterey College of Law's mission is to support our community, and we are proud that our legal clinics are able to provide resources for some of our most vulnerable community members.”

and CEO*

For over 25 years, Monterey College of Law's legal clinics have been a vital resource for those with limited or no access to legal assistance in Monterey County. "Funds raised during the Monterey County Gives! ensures that we continue bridging the justice gap by providing access to free or low-cost legal services to those in our community," shares Deborah Howitt, Assistant Dean of Development.

With limited local resources, particularly free or low-cost legal assistance, our clinics and workshops, offered in both English and Spanish, fill an unmet need, making legal resources available to all residents. "A core part of our College's mission is to support our community, and we are proud that our clinics are able to provide resources for some of our most vulnerable community members," says MCL President and CEO Lisa Sperow.

MCL students, graduates, faculty, and staff support our community through free or low-cost legal clinics (semester-long courses for students) and by offering free or low-cost mediation services through the Mandell Gisnet Center. Hundreds of hours of urgently needed legal services are contributed each year to assist people with various legal matters. Local nonprofits, agencies, governments, and organizations often refer individuals to the MCL legal clinics.

In the past year, we've handled over 5,000 calls for legal help and assisted more than 1,050 people through clinic appointments and cases mediated by our students and faculty mediators.

"Monterey College of Law offers Community Legal Clinics and Legal Workshops to hundreds of community members in Monterey County throughout the year," said MCL Clinical Program Director Lety Perez. "Our low-cost or free services are essential for providing opportunities for all residents to learn about the legal issues they face while self-representing. Community members often tell us that the information they receive in our clinics helps them navigate their legal matters. Their appreciation for our services confirms that our Community Legal Clinics and Legal Workshops help bridge the gap for underserved community members."

MCL is committed to ensuring that everyone can access legal help, regardless of their financial
