

TimeLine's December 2 auction traces the evolution of jewelry through pieces dating as early as the 4th century B.C.

Featured: Byzantine gold ring, 6th-9th century AD, $6,700-$9,380;; Bactrian gold pendant with agate cabochon, 4th-2nd century. BC $4,020-$5,360

HARWICH, ESSEX, UNITED KINGDOM, November 25, 2025 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Beauty, status and identity – those are the three reasons why personal adornment with jewelry is likely to have begun, and it could be said that the same still applies today. Jewelry has ancient origins, which is why most significant pieces from past millennia are usually available only from knowledgeable auction houses where experts can identify and appraise them. A wealth of curated ancient jewelry from the world's greatest cultures will be offered by the British antiquities auction house TimeLine on December 2nd, the opening session of a 5-day event that closes on December 6.

The jewelry highlights include:

- Bactrian gold pendant with agate cabochon, 4th-2nd century B.C. Estimate: £3,000-£4,000 ($4,020-$5,360)
- Romano Egyptian gold ring with garnet intaglio depicting a duck, 1st century B.C. to 1st century A.D. Estimate: £3,000-£4,000 ($4,020-$5,360)
- 1st century A.D. Roman sard (translucent chalcedony) intaglio carved with classical intaglio profile image of a large panther. Estimate £2,000-£3,000 ($2,680-$4,020)
