hospice providers prepare for an increasingly complex billing and compliance environment in 2026, AffinityCore, a US-based business process outsourcing partner, today announced new performance milestones and operational investments designed to help agencies stabilize revenue and strengthen audit readiness. The company's positioning is driven by measurable 2025 client outcomes, enhanced payer-response workflows, and a focus on proactive, technology-enabled audit support.

Over the past year, denial volumes, accounts receivable delays, and extended payer response times have challenged agencies across the United States, a trend that federal and commercial payers are expected to intensify in 2026. Many providers face higher administrative burdens and slower reimbursement cycles while managing staffing shortages, making specialized billing support more critical than ever.

“Home health and hospice agencies are entering 2026 with tighter margins and mounting operational pressures,” said the CEO of AffinityCore. “Our approach focuses on delivering consistent, measurable revenue protection. What sets AffinityCore apart is our US-based, integrated model combining specialized billing experts, dedicated payer-response units, and audit-prep teams, supported by proprietary tools that streamline workflows and minimize delays.”

What differentiates AffinityCore from other billing partners is its continuity-first approach. While many vendors focus on volume processing, AffinityCore builds payer-specific strategies, real-time escalation pathways, and documentation improvement frameworks that align with both federal audit trends and the unique clinical models of home health and hospice providers. This enables agencies not only to recover revenue but to improve the long-term resilience of their billing operations.

This differentiated model has produced clear gains across partner agencies. In 2025, AffinityCore clients reported:

1. Significantly faster payer turnaround and reduced aging A/R, supporting steady cash flow even during workforce shortages.
2. Lower denial rates, driven by targeted documentation review, optimized coding workflows, and structured payer escalation protocols.
3. Stronger audit readiness, with proactive documentation support that helped agencies respond more effectively to both federal and commercial audits.

“Most agencies are stretched thin, clinically and operationally,” said the Chief Operating Officer at AffinityCore. “Our US-based teams are not just processing claims; they are actively managing payer behavior, closing documentation gaps, and reinforcing compliance in real time. That level of engagement is what makes the difference during a year of heightened oversight.”

Why 2026 Represents a Critical Shift?

Federal briefings, utilization data, and industry analyses all point to increased scrutiny in 2026. Hospice oversight is expanding, home health billing audits are becoming more frequent, and payers are enforcing more rigid documentation requirements across the board. These pressures disproportionately affect small and mid-sized agencies that lack specialized billing capacity and struggle to keep experienced staff on board.

For these agencies, reliable billing partnerships are no longer optional; they are essential to maintaining financial stability, compliance posture, and uninterrupted patient services.

AffinityCore's 2026 Initiatives

To support providers through these shifts, AffinityCore unveiled several initiatives designed to strengthen revenue stability and audit readiness:

1. Expansion of the Hospice Audit Support Division, providing agencies with deeper expertise as federal oversight becomes more rigorous.
2. Regional partnerships with multi-site home health networks are aimed at standardizing billing workflows and improving payer response times across larger provider ecosystems.

Together, these initiatives reflect AffinityCore's broader mission: to equip home health and hospice agencies with the operational strength, specialized billing capacity, and compliance-focused support needed to thrive in an increasingly complex reimbursement landscape. By integrating expertise, technology, and US-based oversight, AffinityCore continues to shape a more stable and predictable billing future for home-based care providers.

Positioning Statement

AffinityCore's market presence in the US and its measurable impact on partner agency outcomes distinguish the company from competitors. By integrating specialized expertise, technology, and proactive audit support, AffinityCore enables agencies to scale efficiently while maintaining financial stability and regulatory compliance.
