"This shift reflects the work I have increasingly been asked to perform over the last several years—strategic guidance, complex problem solving, wealth advisory, and systems-driven business transformation," Hernandez said. "Clients, professionals, and companies need clarity, structure, and modern operational tools. That is where my value is strongest."

Hernandez holds a degree in Economics from The University of Texas at Austin, where he was named Economics Student of the Year, along with a law degree earned in 2001. His background includes extensive litigation, cross-border advisory, real estate brokerage, capital strategy, and immigration consulting. 3. AI-Driven Operational Systems for Law Firms & Businesses

Designing custom AI and automation workflows, intake pipelines, compliance systems, and productivity infrastructures for firms across New York and California.

4. Real Estate Advisory in Probate, Trust, Commercial & International Sectors
