This holiday season, Paws of War is on a mission to deliver gratitude and much-needed supplies to U.S. military dog handlers and their K-9 partners overseas.

-- The holiday season is a special time of the year when people give to others to show their gratitude and appreciation for all that they do year-round. Now, people have a unique and critical opportunity to give back to dog handlers in the U.S. military who are stationed overseas. Paws of War is on a holiday mission to send special care packages to U.S. K-9 teams overseas and is seeking community members to help ensure its success.

We know people are looking for ways to support military members, and we would love for them to join us with this mission.”

veteran and coordinator for

"We are all so honored to help support them in doing what they do for our country," said Derek Cartwright, U.S. Army veteran and international logistics coordinator for Paws of War. "We know people are looking for ways to support military members, and we would love for them to join us with this mission."

Not only is it the season of giving, but Giving Tuesday is also upon us, reminding us to give now and beyond. Paws of War is seeking monetary donations of all sizes to help fill the care packages being sent to military bases overseas. The care packages will include sun goggles, socks for handlers, Kong toys for the K-9s, hydrating drinks, cooling fans, booties for the dogs, and more.

Individually, it would be difficult for people to make much of a difference in getting a care package to military members stationed overseas. By coming together to help Paws of War with their care package mission, we can make a significant impact that will be appreciated by all those who receive the items. By teaming up with Paws of War to provide the care packages, people will show their appreciation and support, help them feel more connected to home during the holidays, boost their morale, and provide them with practical supplies. It also helps to create a sense of community between military members and civilians.

"This is a great time to get in on the mission and excellent care packages that they are going to use and love," said Cartwright. "We invite everyone to give a monetary donation in any amount to help and appreciate everyone's effort in helping these military members."
