of juggling PayPal, Venmo, Zelle, and other payment apps

Payable.at, a revolutionary payment link aggregation platform, officially launches today to help independent professionals, consultants, and small business owners streamline how they collect payments from clients. The service addresses a common pain point faced by millions of solo entrepreneurs: the chaos of managing multiple payment apps and links.

Independent professionals shouldn't have to text five different payment links to their clients or keep a notes app full of their Venmo, PayPal, and Zelle handles”

Austin

"Independent professionals shouldn't have to text five different payment links to their clients or keep a notes app full of their Venmo, PayPal, and Zelle handles," said Austin Fernald, founder of Payable.at. "We created Payable.at to give these hardworking professionals a single, clean, professional page that showcases all their payment options. It's like a Linktree, but specifically designed for getting paid."

The Problem Payable.at Solves

Today's independent workforce-from appraisers and photographers to contractors and consultants-typically uses multiple payment platforms to accommodate client preferences. This creates several challenges:

Clients asking "Do you have Venmo?" or "Can I pay you through Zelle?" after work is completed
Professionals manually sending payment details via text or email for every transaction
Lost or forgotten payment information buried in message threads
An unprofessional appearance when sharing multiple payment links

Payable.at eliminates these friction points by providing a single, customizable payment page that professionals can brand and share across all communications.

How Payable.at Works

The platform operates on a simple three-step process:

Customize: Users create a professional page with their name, logo, and business description

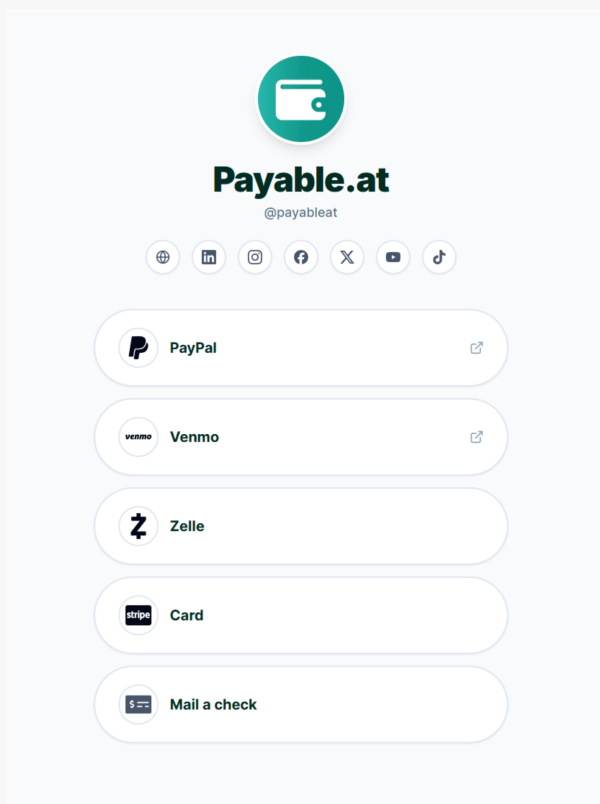

Connect: Add links to existing payment methods-PayPal, Venmo, Zelle, Cash App, Stripe, or any custom payment solution

Share: Send one clean link via invoice, text, email, or social media, allowing clients to choose their preferred payment method

Importantly, Payable.at is not a payment processor. The platform doesn't handle transactions directly; instead, it serves as a centralized hub that connects clients to a professional's existing payment accounts. All transactions remain secure within established payment providers' systems.

"We're not trying to replace payment processors or compete with Stripe and Square," Austin explained. "We're solving a different problem-the organizational nightmare of having your payment information scattered across multiple apps. Payable.at brings order to that chaos."

Built for the Modern Independent Economy

With over 60 million Americans working as freelancers or independent contractors, the need for streamlined payment solutions has never been greater. Payable.at specifically targets professionals who:

Bill clients on a per-job basis rather than through formal invoicing systems

Work independently or run small service businesses

Need to accommodate diverse client payment preferences

Want to maintain a professional image in all client interactions

The platform has already gained traction among appraisers, home inspectors, consultants, coaches, photographers, contractors, cleaners, tutors, and other service professionals who need flexible payment collection without enterprise-level complexity.

Availability

Payable.at launches today with both free and premium plans designed to accommodate professionals at every stage of their business. The free tier allows users to get started immediately with no credit card required, while premium features are available for those seeking advanced customization and analytics capabilities.

Key Features and Benefits

Professional Appearance: Creates a clean, credible payment page instead of random text messages with payment handles

Client Convenience: Allows clients to pay using their preferred method without friction

Time Savings: Eliminates the need to repeatedly send payment information or answer "How do I pay you?" questions

No Platform Lock-in: Works with any payment provider, so professionals never have to switch services

Quick Setup: Users can create and share their payment page in minutes

Mobile-Optimized: Works seamlessly on all devices, from smartphones to desktop computers

Security and Trust

Security is a top priority for Payable.at. Since the platform doesn't process payments directly, sensitive financial information never passes through Payable.at's systems. All transactions occur within clients' chosen payment providers (PayPal, Venmo, Zelle, etc.), which maintain their own robust security protocols and fraud protection measures.

Looking Ahead

The company plans to introduce additional features in the coming months, including:

Enhanced analytics to track which payment methods clients prefer

Custom domain support for white-label branding

Integration with popular invoicing platforms

Expanded profile customization options

Payment reminder functionality

"This is just the beginning," said Austin. "We're listening closely to our early users and building features that truly solve their payment collection challenges. Our goal is to become the go-to solution for any professional who needs a simple, elegant way to present payment options to clients."
