Dr. Roholt has presented on this topic at multiple professional meetings, authored technique literature in collaboration with industry partners, and contributed to the broader clinical conversation around modern composite science. His work includes a published technique white paper outlining the Posterior Compression Technique, a simplified method for enhancing posterior composite longevity using dual-cure bulk-fill materials.

According to Pier 210 Dental Group, Dr. Roholt co-presented a lecture at the International Association for Dental Research (IADR) in 2017, sharing his findings on the technique known as "Dual Cure, Bulk Fill, Posterior Composites." While the original IADR session materials are not publicly indexed, his extensive professional lecture history — including presentations for regional dental societies and industry educational programs — reinforces his continuing leadership in restorative materials innovation.

A detailed white paper authored by Dr. Roholt describing the technique is available via Parkell, supporting the clinical validity of the method.

In addition to his restorative research, Dr. Roholt is recognized globally as one of the first 100 dentists worldwide certified in the Pinhole Surgical Technique™, a minimally invasive procedure used to treat gum recession without scalpels or sutures. His advanced training extends through the Pankey Institute, the Dawson Academy, and continuing education in TMJ disorders, craniofacial pain, dental sleep medicine, and implantology.

Dr. Roholt maintains professional membership with:

- American Dental Association
