To be part of the Bay Area's premier expositions, TERAVARNA invites artists worldwide to enter a juried competition for an opportunity to exhibit—free of charge—at San Francisco art events.

Produced by AMP (Art Market Productions) and co-hosted by Fair Director Kelly Freeman and Artistic Director Nato Thompson, the art fair in San Francisco will gather artists, collectors, curators, galleries, and international visitors in a vibrant space, celebrating the cultural vibes of the city and the world of contemporary art.

The fair is expected to welcome over 85 leading galleries from all parts of the globe in a highly curated setting, creating a dynamic space for seasoned collectors and industry experts to interact. The mission is to offer a shared platform that engages emerging and established talents in professional exchange.

TERAVARNA opens submissions from artists worldwide to take part in a juried competition, with no restrictions on the subject, style, theme, or medium—including painting, mixed media, photography, digital art, sculpture, and 3D installations.

Artists aged 18 and above are eligible to send their works. There is an entry fee of $29 per artwork submission for physical presentation, while the fee is $15 per artwork submission for digital presentation.

Selected artists will have a free showcase at the art fair San Francisco, as TERAVARNA aims to provide significant visibility for their work. The gallery will feature selected works on a large TV monitor for artists opting for digital representation. The deadline for San Francisco Art Fair 2026 submission closes on January 31, 2026.

Other than the opportunity for free exhibits in San Francisco, the winners will also benefit from mass media outreach by TERAVARNA and the fair organizers, along with promotional activities and participation in other art-focused programs.

With its participation in the upcoming trailblazing show, TERAVARNA remains committed to its mission of democratizing art and helping artists reach an international audience. The contemporary gallery is all set to leave its mark in San Francisco, California, with its curated brilliance.

Participants in the San Francisco Juried Art Competition may send multiple submissions for review by the jury. Only jury-selected artists will be showcased at the exhibition.
