COMMUNITY RESPONSE: Pacific Palisades Fire Restoration Program

When the Pacific Palisades fires devastated communities in 2025, Margaret's the Couture Cleaner launched an immediate response program. Teams traveled from La Jolla, Los Angeles, and San Diego locations to collect smoke-damaged garments, including wedding dresses, military uniforms, and family heirlooms that survivors believed were beyond repair. Using advanced hydroxyl treatments, specialized hand cleaning techniques, and decades of textile restoration expertise, Margaret's technicians worked overtime to restore thousands of fire-damaged garments. The company temporarily adjusted regular operations to accommodate the restoration effort, reuniting families with irreplaceable items.

Every item told a story.

"When you return something that represents someone's history, you're giving them back more than clothing—you're giving them comfort."
