continues to build as The BOW Knows Business Accelerator, a signature initiative of The BOW Institute in partnership with the Town of Bladensburg, enters Week 3 with another highly anticipated virtual learning session. Following two impactful weeks of strategy, leadership, and operations, participants are now preparing to deepen their business foundations with guidance from three nationally respected experts.

Designed as a four-week accelerator to help entrepreneurs start 2026 strong, the BOW Knows Business Accelerator brings together subject matter experts from across the BOW ecosystem to deliver actionable insights, practical tools, and real-world strategies. Week 3 focuses on helping founders align their personal vision with business growth, strengthen financial systems, and build the infrastructure required to scale sustainably.

This upcoming virtual session will feature three dynamic presenters, each addressing a critical pillar of business success:

Dr. Cornelia Shipley Bearyman, Founder of 3C Consulting, will guide participants through Designing Your Life, helping entrepreneurs align purpose, leadership, and long-term vision so their businesses support the lives they truly want to build.

Christina Lynch, financial consultant with Trydent Consulting, will demystify Business Financials, equipping founders with clarity around cash flow, financial discipline, and decision-making that supports stability and growth.

Ann Williams, operations and infrastructure strategist, will focus on Business Logistics and Infrastructure, helping entrepreneurs strengthen internal systems, workflows, and operational readiness for larger clients and opportunities.

Together, these sessions are designed to move entrepreneurs beyond theory into execution — reinforcing the Accelerator’s goal of helping participants not just start businesses, but build resilient, scalable enterprises.

“The BOW Knows Business Accelerator is intentionally structured to meet entrepreneurs where they are and guide them step-by-step toward stronger, healthier businesses,” said a representative from The BOW Institute. “Week 3 is about alignment — aligning vision, finances, and infrastructure so growth is intentional and sustainable.”

The Accelerator has already drawn strong participation from entrepreneurs across the region, with attendees praising the practical instruction, access to high-level expertise, and the supportive learning environment cultivated by The BOW Institute.

As the program heads toward its final week, excitement continues to grow around the tangible progress participants are making and the momentum they are carrying into the new year.
