

Dr. Anelia Sutton Announces Flexible Payment Plans for Mission Possible University Students

New payment options expand access to practical legal education through Mission Possible University

BALTIMORE, MD, UNITED STATES, December 15, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dr. Anelia Sutton, founder of Mission Possible University (MPU), today announced the launch of flexible payment plans designed to make MPU's educational programs more accessible to students seeking practical legal education.

The new payment plan options allow eligible students to enroll in Mission Possible University courses through structured installment payments rather than a single upfront cost. The initiative reflects MPU's continued focus on reducing financial barriers to education and increasing access to legal knowledge.

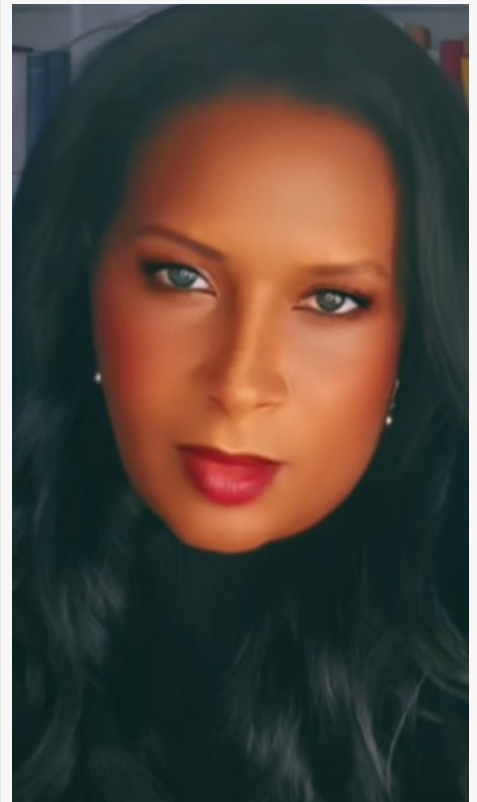

"Education should be accessible, not restrictive," said Dr. Anelia Sutton. "By offering payment plans, Mission Possible University is providing more people with the opportunity to learn how the legal system works and how to better prepare themselves for real-world legal situations."

Mission Possible University is an online education platform that provides courses focused on legal education for everyday people, including understanding court procedures, legal terminology, documentation practices, and strategic preparation. MPU is an educational institution and does not provide legal advice or attorney services.

Payment plan availability, eligibility requirements, and installment details are presented to students during the enrollment process on the Mission Possible University website.
