

Okorio Acquires AI & Analytics Practice

Strategic acquisition positions Okorio to lead in Workday's Analytics and AI offerings

DALLAS, TX, UNITED STATES, December 17, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Okorio, a specialized Workday consulting and strategy firm, today announced the acquisition of Active Cyber's AI & Analytics division. This establishes a dedicated Workday Analytics & AI practice within Okorio, combining deep analytics expertise with proven Workday delivery capabilities.

Analytics and AI aren't add-ons anymore—they're core to maximizing Workday's value, and we're embedding them into every customer engagement.”

Rohit Mehrotra, Co-Founder of Okorio

The transaction brings together Okorio's Workday implementation strength under Justin Williams, Chief Revenue Officer, with the proven enterprise analytics experience of Brandon Britton, Vice President of AI & Analytics.

"We're doubling down on Workday AI & Analytics at Okorio", said Rohit Mehrotra, Co-Founder of Okorio. "Analytics and AI aren't add-ons anymore—they're core to maximizing Workday's value, and we're embedding them into every customer engagement."

Enhanced Capabilities for Workday Customers

The acquired practice will enable Okorio to deliver:

- Intelligent Workday solutions from day one – Advanced analytics, predictive insights, and operational reporting embedded into every engagement, leveraging Workday Illuminate, Prism Analytics, Extend, Workday Data Cloud, and Workday Assistant.
- Accelerated data modernization – Strategic partnerships with MSTR, Snowflake and AWS (both Workday partners) enable zero-copy integrations and advanced AI use cases.
- Integrated business outcomes – Continued collaboration across strategy and delivery practices to develop solutions that drive measurable results.

The acquisition aligns with Workday's strategic direction around unified people and finance data and real-time analytics. Workday's Data Cloud and zero-copy integrations with partners like Snowflake and Databricks provide the foundation for governed real-time insights that connect HR and finance data to operational and market intelligence.
