“Ken has played a critical role in building and expanding some of our most important client relationships,” said Jonathan Poole, CEO of F2OnSite. “He brings deep industry knowledge, long-term customer trust, and a strong understanding of how to deliver complex projects at scale. This promotion reflects both his performance and his impact on the business.”

In his new role, Bowser will focus on new and existing strategic account leadership, enterprise client growth, and long-term partnership development across F2OnSite's national customer base.

Prior to joining F2OnSite, Bowser spent almost a decade at Sullivan and Cogliano, a CorTech company, where he held multiple enterprise account and business development leadership roles. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration from Springfield College and is a Certified Professional Staffing and Account Executive (CPSAE).
