The Summit brought together Member States, United Nations entities, international organizations, civil society, and development institutions to advance policy coherence and collective action on poverty eradication, decent work, social inclusion, and resilient development pathways. ESGIN's participation reflected its growing institutional engagement within multilateral development and sustainability governance frameworks.

Recognition as an Official United Nations NGO Showcase

During the United Nations Second World Summit for Social Development, ESGIN was selected through a competitive and rigorous review process as an Official Showcase at the United Nations NGO Liaison venue. Its organizational model and policy contributions were presented as part of a limited group of civil society initiatives recognized for their relevance to sustainable finance, social inclusion, and development innovation.

This selection underscored the international relevance of ESGIN's approach in connecting financial systems, social development objectives, and governance innovation in alignment with global development priorities.

Special Accreditation and High-Level Policy Engagement

As one of a small number of newly established non-governmental organizations granted special accreditation, ESGIN's delegation participated in high-level policy dialogues alongside governments, United Nations entities, international organizations, and development finance institutions.

It is an honor to engage with the United Nations in advancing shared values of inclusion, dignity, and sustainable development, ensuring that global progress serves people and communities.”

Chienie Tsai, Founder, Global ESG Leadership Organization

Engagements addressed a range of priority areas, including sustainable finance and the care economy, Africa-focused development and inclusion, public-private partnership models, youth and women empowerment frameworks, as well as digital learning, governance, and social resilience. For an organization operating outside the traditional United Nations agency system, this level of access represented a substantive step in institutional participation and policy contribution.

Convening a Side Event on Purpose-Driven Capital

ESGIN also played a leading role in co-organizing an official side event entitled “Capital with Purpose: Mobilizing Finance for Inclusive and Sustainable Growth.” The dialogue examined how capital could be mobilized not only as a mechanism for economic activity, but as a systemic instrument for strengthening inclusion, resilience, and shared prosperity.

ESGIN further acknowledged the role of its Honorary Management in reinforcing governance standards, institutional integrity, and organizational development, and reaffirmed its intention to deepen cooperation with international partners across multilateral and cross-sector platforms.
