The acquisition represents a significant and strategic expansion for the Buyer, extending its geographic reach into the high-growth Texas and Southwest markets. Broadhead Boring, based in Austin, Texas, is a trusted provider of underground construction services for utilities and infrastructure, specializing in directional drilling, trenching, and auger boring. The combination of the two companies creates a new regional leader with expanded capabilities and capacity across a broader service area. The Buyer was able to execute a creative deal structure that aligned the interests of both parties, ensuring a smooth transition and setting the stage for future growth.

KJ Fesmire, the owner of Broadhead Boring, will remain with the company to lead the new regional operations. "This partnership with the Buyer is an exciting next chapter for Broadhead Boring," said Fesmire. "The Buyer's resources and deep industry experience, combined with our strong regional presence and expertise, will allow us to scale our operations and better serve our customers in Texas. I am eager to grow the business with our new partners."

Dr. Andrei Duta, Co-Founder and Managing Partner at Alta Towers Advisors, who advised Broadhead Boring on the transaction, added: "We are delighted to have advised KJ Fesmire and Broadhead Boring on this transaction. The collaborative spirit and creative approach demonstrated by both Buyer and Seller throughout the process were exceptional. This deal positions the merged companies for substantial success in the future."
