Since launching on Kickstarter, the Femometer Ring Air campaign has entered an active funding phase, with several early bird reward tiers now live. These limited-quantity tiers provide backers with reduced pricing compared to later funding stages, reflecting early interest in the product's approach to women-centered wearable technology.

Campaign updates indicate that a special New Year-related incentive is scheduled to be introduced around January. While specific details have not yet been publicly disclosed, the announcement suggests that additional discounts or exclusive benefits may be unlocked to mark the start of the new year, creating anticipation among those following the project.

As the fundraising campaign continues through the holiday season, further updates are expected in the coming days. Observers interested in the evolution of smart rings and women-focused health wearables are encouraged to monitor the campaign for upcoming announcements and milestone updates.
