Loomis is a vibrant town located in Placer County with an estimated population of approximately 6,900 residents. Nearly 90% of housing units in Loomis are single-family homes, making the community an ideal fit for Residential PACE enhancements and improvements that help homeowners invest in safer, more efficient housing.

Residents in Loomis can now take advantage of PACE financing to fund improvements such as:

- Energy-efficient HVAC systems, windows, and doors
- Cool roofing and insulation
- Earthquake protection upgrades
- Water-conserving systems and more

PACE financing allows homeowners to pay for eligible upgrades through their property tax bill over time, with $0 down, no credit score requirements, and long-term, fixed payments.

“Renew Financial is thrilled to welcome the City of Loomis to the growing list of communities that have embraced Residential PACE,” said Vinay Gupta, Chief Executive Officer at Renew Financial. “This program helps homeowners overcome upfront cost barriers, making critical home improvements more accessible while strengthening community resilience and sustainability.”

Loomis joins a growing roster of California jurisdictions that have recently opted into the Residential PACE program, including Lawndale, Santa Maria, Lincoln, Mountain House, Willows, Hawthorne, Calabasas, and Rocklin — broadening PACE access across diverse regions of the state.

Renew Financial continues to support local governments in authorizing PACE and educating homeowners about the benefits of long-term, property-secured financing. With its expanded footprint in California, Renew Financial remains committed to driving energy efficiency and climate resilience throughout the state.
