"Attune is the future of public art, a multidisciplinary cultural platform amplifying artists across disciplines and connecting us in a collective experience unlike anything before," shares Carmen Zella. "I envision Attune expanding into a series that forever positions Los Angeles County as a trailblazer, a beacon of cultural inspiration when unifying, uplifting, and positive experiences are most needed. Art is a beacon of hope, a reminder that beauty exists in all of us, and that our connection to one another is the most powerful medium of all.”

The event will feature interdisciplinary artists Miguel Atwood-Ferguson, Beatie Wolfe, Media Pollution, Sarah Rara, Claire Rousay, L.Frank, Qur’an Shaheed, Carmina Escobar, and Odeya Nini, each presenting unique sound-based works that invite audiences to slow down, listen deeply, engage, and connect with one another. In addition, light artists Emery C. Martin and Kerstin Larissa Hovland are creating light-based sculptural installations at each site.

“Everyone has a valid and needed voice in this world, regardless if one is a trained musician or not, and this piece will make everyone sound sublime and in harmony. No one can silence us... Everyone's voice in society is relevant and has its own divine intrinsic beauty and worth,” shares Miguel Atwood-Ferguson.

In Partnership with ARUP, Los Angeles Department of Cultural Affairs, KCRW, Arts Council for Long Beach, City of Santa Monica, NOW Art, and Los Angeles Recreation & Parks, Attune is guided by a dynamic group of advisors comprising HealthTunes, KCRW, dublab, LOOKOUT.FM, Music Mends Minds, Point C, Theater DNA, Push More Buttons, Music Changing Lives, Contemporary Cultural!

Attune is presented with the support of our sponsors, who include Mural Colors, Kinetic Lighting, Walmart Foundation, the Office of LA County Supervisor Janice Hahn, City of LA Councilmember Eunisses Hernandez (Council District 1), City of LA Councilmember Monica Rodriguez (Council District 7), City of LA Councilmember John S.
