Presentations covering a wide variety of space exploration, development, and policy topics are welcomed.

ABOUT THE ISDC

The ISDC brings together space industry executives, engineers, scientists, educators, students, and enthusiasts to advance spacefaring civilization. Past conferences have drawn tens of thousands of attendees from dozens of countries, featuring leaders from NASA, commercial space companies, academia, and media. The 2026 theme is "Space for Us All."

TOPICS INCLUDE:

Lunar, Mars, and cislunar exploration and settlement • AI in spaceflight • deep space missions • spaceflight technology • commercial space and infrastructure • life support systems • space collaboration • space solar power • space debris mitigation • planetary defense • space law and policy • space health and human factors • interstellar exploration • space business and entrepreneurship • space policy and law • space solar power • large-scale space settlements.

This is just a sample of the ISDC's topic areas. Proposals on other space-related topics will be considered.
