enSights, an AI-native, cloud-based energy business management software company, today announced it has been named a winner in the 2026 BIG Innovation Awards, which recognize companies, leaders and products delivering impactful, innovative solutions.

"The 2026 BIG Innovation Awards winners show that true innovation is no longer about chasing the latest buzzwords," said Russ Fordyce, Chief Recognition Officer at the Business Intelligence Group. "It's about building intelligent platforms, automating workflows with purpose, and making trust, privacy and resilience the foundation of every breakthrough. These organizations and leaders are not just keeping pace with change, they are shaping the future of global business."

enSights was recognized for its outstanding contributions to innovation in the Energy category. The company redefines how asset owners and independent power producers (IPPs) operate at scale by enabling decision-grade operations that connect performance, financial impact and accountability in one unified system, which has led to up to a 90% reduction in reporting time, 50% faster issue resolution and portfolio revenue improvements of up to 7%.

Asset owners and IPPs struggle with fragmented data, hidden revenue leaks and unclear cross-team accountability. enSights unifies performance, financial and operations data in one decision-grade, AI-driven platform so teams can spot issues sooner, prioritize the right fixes and improve portfolio returns.

"We're honored to be recognized as a 2026 BIG Innovation Awards winner," said Alon Mashkovich, CEO of enSights. "The program celebrates innovation that delivers real business impact, and that's what we focus on every day. We help asset owners and IPPs catch issues earlier, act faster as portfolios scale, grow more complex and drive measurable gains so they stop leaving money on the table."

The 2026 BIG Innovation Awards winners reveal that innovation is no longer about new technologies; it's about how those technologies can make a real business impact.
