World Organization of States – International Parliament for Safety and Peace, promoting people-centered international cooperation and sustainable development.

International cooperation must begin with people. Sustainable development and social well-being are built on shared values, collective responsibility and collaboration that fosters resilient societies”

Spokesperson of WOS-IPSP.

Operating across multiple regions worldwide, WOS-IPSP advances international cooperation frameworks that place human development, social well-being, and community resilience at the core of global progress. The organization works closely with governments, local authorities, civil society organizations, academic institutions, and community leaders to promote initiatives that enhance access to essential services, education, healthcare, and sustainable economic opportunities.

WOS-IPSP’s approach is grounded in the principle that lasting development is achieved through meaningful engagement with communities, respect for cultural diversity, and the strengthening of local capacities. By encouraging constructive dialogue and people-to-people cooperation, the organization supports development models that are socially inclusive, culturally sensitive, and responsive to local realities.

Through its programs and partnerships, WOS-IPSP contributes to improved social cohesion and institutional cooperation, supporting initiatives that promote human dignity, inclusion, peace, and sustainable growth. The organization's activities are designed to empower communities, reinforce social stability, and encourage long-term development outcomes that benefit present and future generations.

As global challenges increasingly require coordinated and humane responses, WOS-IPSP continues to serve as an international forum for dialogue, cooperation, and action; strengthening connections between people and institutions while advancing a people-centered model of global development.
