“Watching Alyssa grow from a paralegal into a top-performing law student has been incredibly rewarding,” Sralla said. “She has a strong work ethic, a sharp legal mind, and a genuine desire to help people. We’re proud to welcome her back and support her continued journey in the law.”

Perez, 25, was a second-year law student at St. Mary's University School of Law, where she distinguished herself academically, particularly in legal writing. In the spring of 2025, she earned both the “Excellence in Legal Writing” Award and the “Best Brief Award” for her brief titled “Defendant’s Memorandum of Law in Support of its Motion for Summary Judgment.” The brief addressed a Failure to Accommodate employment lawsuit involving a former employee with ADHD and was recognized for its clarity, persuasive structure, and legal precision.

While completing her law degree, Perez worked part-time as a paralegal with Sralla Family Law, PLLC, gaining hands-on experience in family law matters while assisting clients and supporting the firm's legal team. She credited her earlier time at the firm with sparking her interest in pursuing a legal career.

Perez, who is Sralla's niece through marriage, said returning to the office felt both familiar and meaningful.

"I was excited to get back to work on cases and help the clients," Perez said. "That's what makes this career worthwhile—being able to support people during some of the most difficult moments in their lives."

A San Antonio native, Perez graduated from Clark High School and earned her Bachelor of Arts in Political Science with a pre-law concentration from St. Edward's University in Austin. She is the daughter of Sylvia Sandoval Perez and Robert Perez, both of San Antonio.

Sralla Family Law, PLLC said Perez's return reflected the firm's continued commitment to mentorship, professional development, and cultivating future leaders in the legal profession—values that have long defined the firm's approach to serving families throughout San Antonio.
