

Redacted Optics Launches Official Website, Expanding Public Access to Product and Corporate Details

Website launch fulfills commitment to ongoing shareholder communication and transparency

FT WORTH, TX, UNITED STATES, February 5, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Redacted Optics, a wholly owned subsidiary of RDCT, today announced the launch of its official website,

Transparency and consistency matter. This website gives everyone a place to review what we've discussed publicly and sets the foundation for continued disclosures as milestones are reached.”

Brandon Sisson, CEO

www.RedactedOptics.com, providing expanded public access to product concepts, company direction, and high-level technical details previously referenced in shareholder communications.

The website rollout follows commitments made by management to provide regular, substantive updates and greater transparency as the company advances toward the introduction of its first designed solution, which is expected to be announced later this month.

The site includes background on Redacted Optics' mission, its approach to next-generation visual and augmented firearm optics, and contextual information intended to help shareholders and interested parties better understand the company's technology roadmap and development philosophy.

“Transparency and consistency matter, particularly as we move from concept into execution,” said Brandon Sisson, CEO of Redacted Optics. “This website gives shareholders and industry observers a centralized place to review what we've discussed publicly and sets the foundation for continued disclosures as milestones are reached.”

Management emphasized that the website is intended to complement — not replace — formal disclosures, press releases, and regulatory filings, and that additional updates will continue to be communicated through established channels.

The company expects to expand the site's content over time as product development progresses and further announcements are made.
