America's Best Flight School

I really just wanted to show the world what it's like running a flight school. I think most people don't really understand the flight training industry and the effort it takes to become a pilot.”

Tim Jedrek

Each episode takes viewers inside a real flight school, touring the fleet, sitting down with CFIs, student pilots, and school owners, to show the world what it truly takes to run a flight school and train the next generation of aviators. From a business owner learning to fly his own plane to a 20-year-old working toward her instrument rating and a career with the airlines, every story is a testament to the passion that drives the aviation community.

“I really just wanted to show the world what it's like running a flight school. I think most people don't really understand the flight training industry and the effort it takes to become a pilot. Every pilot has their own journey and reasons for starting flight training.”— Tim Jedrek, Founder, Right Rudder Marketing

The series also aims to address a persistent gap in public understanding of the flight training industry. The journey from a single Cessna 172 and a handful of students to a full-scale flight school operation is one of dedication, investment, and community impact. America's Best Flight Schools captures what makes each school unique and how the love of aviation transcends state lines.
