By integrating Veridion's company intelligence with Claira's private deal intelligence, our AI agents can deliver sharper analyses, surface hidden risks, and help teams move faster” platform built for investment teams, today announced a strategic partnership with Veridion, a business intelligence provider that uses proprietary AI to deliver the world's most accurate and timely company data. Together, the two companies are creating a more comprehensive, insight-driven approach to investment analysis by combining private deal data with Veridion's deep company intelligence, covering 134 million businesses worldwide.

Eric Chang, CEO and Co-Founder at Claira

The partnership brings Veridion's AI-enriched company intelligence, spanning firmographics, business classification, ESG profiles, location data, technographics, and product catalogs, directly into Claira's Agentic AI platform. By unifying this comprehensive dataset with Claira's ability to capture, structure, and analyze private investment data, investment teams gain a deeper, more complete view of every opportunity throughout the deal lifecycle.

“Investment teams shouldn't have to stitch together insights from disconnected systems,” said Eric Chang, Co-Founder & CEO at Claira. “By integrating Veridion's company intelligence with Claira's private deal intelligence, our AI agents can deliver sharper analyses, surface hidden risks and opportunities, and help teams move faster with greater confidence.”

Claira's Agentic AI platform is designed to continuously learn from proprietary investment data—such as diligence materials, internal analyses, and historical deal outcomes—while proactively generating insights tailored to each firm's investment strategy. With Veridion's company intelligence enriching that foundation, Claira's agents can now provide more context-aware recommendations, benchmarking, and comparative analyses across deals and portfolios.

“We're excited to partner with Claira to bring our company intelligence into an agent-driven investment workflow,” said Florin Tufan, CEO at Veridion. “Claira's platform transforms data into action. Together, we're giving investment professionals a 360-degree view of every deal, combining their proprietary insights with the kind of deep, AI-enriched company data that was previously impossible to access at scale."

The combined solution helps investment teams:

Build a complete picture of target companies by enriching proprietary deal data with Veridion's firmographics, ESG profiles, and operational intelligence across 134M+ businesses

- Accelerate due diligence with AI-powered peer benchmarking, market context, and risk signals drawn from Veridion's weekly-refreshed dataset.
- Screen and prioritize deals faster using accurate business classification, technology stack data, and real-time growth signals.
- Uncover hidden opportunities in the private company landscape that legacy datasets miss, with Veridion's deep coverage of SMEs and emerging markets.

This partnership marks another step in Claira's mission to redefine how investment teams leverage AI, moving beyond static tools toward intelligent agents that actively support better decision-making.
