The result is a list that's divided into three sections: the MSP Pioneer 250, which recognizes leaders in providing managed services to the small and midsized business market; the MSP Elite 150, which recognizes large, data center-focused IT firms; and the Managed Security 100, which recognizes MSPs focused primarily on security services.

President of Astute Technology Management, Eric Madden, was excited about the honor, saying:

"This award has a lot to do with consistency and dependability. People rely on us to show up when they're in trouble, and they've returned the favor with consistent growth for three years in a row. We have our wonderful clients in Columbus, Cincinnati, and Cleveland to thank for this award. On a personal level, satisfaction comes from helping growing companies see IT as a driver of productivity, not just another cost. As things like AI, advanced automation, and business intelligence continue to shape how businesses here operate, I enjoy the feeling of helping people stay ahead of those huge changes."

According to MSP software company ConnectWise, there are an estimated 40,000 managed IT service providers in the United States, meaning that inclusion on the CRN 500 is a rare distinction that around one percent of managed IT services companies in the country earn.

For over 20 years, Astute Technology Management has been an active member of the Ohio business community. During that time, the company has helped manufacturing organizations, construction companies, and the region's professional services firms get the most out of their IT budgets.

Astute Technology Management's Co-Founder, Kane Tabor, had this to say:

"Three years in a row is just a tremendous feeling. There's a lot of hard work that goes into this behind the scenes. Our help desk technicians, our consulting and projects team, our service manager—everyone has a hand in supporting our sales team and keeping us moving forward."
