The Tulsa program is designed to balance flexibility with hands-on repetition. Students complete foundational coursework online while participating in in-person lab sessions and clinical training inside a professional practice environment.

“Our model prioritizes experiential learning,” said Chris Lofton, CEO of Zollege. “Tulsa students will graduate with practical experience that aligns directly with employer expectations.”

Through a collaboration with Cherry Street Family Dentistry, students will experience firsthand how healthcare practices operate, gaining insight into patient flow, documentation processes, and procedural support in a live setting.

The extended 16-week structure allows students to deepen their understanding of both patient care and operational efficiency before pursuing certification and employment opportunities.
