investorTV: The Silver Opportunity Set: Developers, Producers & the Demand Cycle Ahead on March 10

The global silver market is currently experiencing its sixth consecutive year of structural supply deficit. Industrial demand continues to expand rapidly, driven by solar photovoltaic deployment, electrification trends, and the emergence of new technologies such as high-voltage AI data centers. At the same time, global mine production has remained relatively flat, while a significant portion of silver supply is produced as a by-product of base metal mining, limiting the industry's ability to respond quickly to price signals.

This panel will explore how these dynamics are influencing project development, investment strategies, and the broader silver opportunity set.

Key topics that will be covered include:

- Structural supply deficits and the evolving composition of global silver demand
- Industrial demand growth from solar energy, electrification, and emerging technologies
- The role of recycling and above-ground inventories in balancing the market
- Supply constraints created by by-product mining and stagnating global production
- How developers and producers position projects to capitalize on long-term silver fundamentals
- Key factors investors evaluate when assessing silver development opportunities

Attendees will also have the opportunity to participate in a live Q&A with the panelists.
