Roof Repair Corp, represented by contractor and consumer advocate Kerry Hettick, met with the Colorado Division of Insurance to present constructive, community-focused ideas designed to improve roof repair outcomes, restore clarity in claims handling, and support the local workforce in Littleton and surrounding communities. The discussion emphasized practical steps to speed repairs, reduce disputes, and reopen steady work for licensed adjusters who have been displaced by ladder assist.

Practical, collaborative ideas discussed

The meeting focused on modest, evidence-based changes that preserve flexibility for carriers while improving outcomes for homeowners and local professionals. Key topics included encouraging meaningful on-site assessments by licensed adjusters and qualified roofing contractors so homeowners receive clear, early direction and repairs can begin sooner; clarifying when technical causation questions should involve licensed forensic expertise; exploring targeted in-state credentialing or endorsement pathways so claims affecting Colorado homes are handled to Colorado standards; promoting transparency about third-party vendor use and inspection methodologies; and collecting focused data on desk reversals and vendor usage to inform policy and reduce unnecessary disputes.

Impact on homeowners, tradespeople, and the market

Faster, clearer claim handling protects property values and helps real estate transactions proceed without unexpected repair disputes. Prompt roof repair and accurate roof inspections reduce interior damage from leaks and lower out-of-pocket costs for homeowners. Predictable on-site workflows restore the roles skilled tradespeople trained for, reducing time spent proving a case instead of completing repairs. Clearer state guidance and credentialing also help adjusters and carriers apply Colorado policy consistently, improving professional standards and consumer confidence.

Benefits to carriers and reinsurers

When claims are handled transparently and by appropriately qualified people, carriers and reinsurers gain more predictable loss outcomes and reduced volatility. Redirecting resources from repeated denials and litigation toward timely repairs improves customer satisfaction and can lower long-term administrative costs. Clearer standards and better data support more accurate underwriting and portfolio management, which benefits the entire insurance ecosystem serving Littleton and Colorado consumers.
