The visit coincided with ISF Children’s Day, featuring student performances and academic exhibitions. Students presented school projects in English, showcasing the fluency and confidence developed through ISF’s educational programs.

Long-term impact on student learning

During the event, several former students shared their experiences using Studycat English during their primary education at ISF. These testimonials highlighted the role of the application in building foundational language skills in a fun, exciting way. The feedback reinforces the importance of providing accessible, high-quality resources to support children’s educational journeys over several years.

A commitment to holistic development

"Observing the students present their projects in English confirms the value of accessible digital education," said Jake Whiddon, Head of Learning, Studycat. "The enthusiasm at the children's party and the testimonials from former students show how consistent support helps children gain confidence and skills for life"

Supporting youth through community and sport

The visit concluded with the ISF Ian Thompson Memorial football tournament. Studycat sponsors the Studycats FC, an under-10 boys' team, who competed throughout the day-long event. This sponsorship, alongside participation in a community walk through local neighborhoods, reflects a commitment to supporting the broader environment in which these students live and learn.
