Georgia announced the opening of priority enrollment and family tours for prospective students in Lower School (Grades 3–5), Middle School (Grades 6–8), and Upper School (Grades 9–12). The initiative is intended to help families explore program fit earlier in the admissions process and learn more about Cumberland’s academic and student support model for independent neurodiverse learners with documented learning differences.

Family tours give parents and students an opportunity to visit campus, observe classroom structure, and discuss a student’s needs with the admissions team. Families who move forward in the process may be invited to submit an application and schedule a student shadow day to experience the school environment firsthand. Enrollment is limited.

“Priority enrollment and tours help families get clarity early,” said Debbi Scarborough, co-founder of Cumberland Academy of Georgia. “We want parents to see how our program supports students academically while reinforcing social and executive functioning development that many learners need to thrive.”
